LIBRARY RECEIVES PAINTING OF MEXICAN PRESIDENT JUAREZ

On Wednesday, October 4, in a ceremony at the Library of Congress, the Ambassador of Mexico José Juan de Olloqui, presented to the United States Congress an oil portrait of Mexican President and patriot Benito Juarez. The gift was presented on behalf of President Echeverria of Mexico in honor of the centenary of President Juarez's death. The Librarian of Congress accepted the portrait which was painted by Martínez Báez of Mexico. Also attending the ceremony were Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, Congressman Eligio de la Garza of Texas, officials from the U.S. State Department and the Mexican Embassy in Washington, D.C., and Library officials.

In presenting the portrait, Ambassador Olloqui pointed out several historical facts which relate the U.S. Congress with President Juarez's personality and struggle for freedom during the French Intervention in Mexico. "Many times his name [Juarez] was heard at the debates of the Congress of the United States. Many enlightened friends like William Henry Seward who understood his cause became his allies and it was through this understanding of his principles that during the French Intervention in Mexico, President Lincoln recognized the legitimate Government represented by Juarez and this fact was perhaps a great deterrent for other nations to join Napoleon in his ambitious and illegitimate adventure," the Ambassador said. He added that, although Juarez never came to Washington, D.C., his wife visited the city and was received at the White House by President Andrew Johnson.

The painting which will hang in the Hispanic Society Room at the Library is an oil on canvas and done in a naturalistic style. President Juarez is portrayed sitting at his desk and holding a blank sheet of paper which might symbolize the Mexican Constitution.

In addition to Senator Taft, a grandson of the late President, the Taft family was represented by Mrs. Donald R. Morris of Washington, D.C., a granddaughter.

In presenting the bound volumes to Senator Taft, Mr. Mumford said, "For nearly half a century, William Howard Taft was a public man. Always mindful of the claims of history, he faithfully preserved a remarkable collection of personal papers and documents which illuminate the political and constitutional philosophy which shaped his illustrious public

R. R. BOWKER COMPANY PREPARES NEW SERIAL TITLES, 1950-1970

The R. R. Bowker Company is preparing a cumulation of New Serial Titles covering the years 1950-1970. The new work will combine and supersede the cumulative volumes 1950-1960, 1961-1965, 1966-1969, and the quarterly issues for 1970.

The Library of Congress had already awarded a contract to the firm of Rowman and Littlefield to publish a 10-year (1961-1970) cumulation of New Serial Titles when it transpired that the Bowker Company was testing the feasibility of preparing the larger cumulation using optical scanning equipment. If both projects had been pressed to a conclusion, users of New Serial Titles would have been forced to purchase both or to choose between two overlapping publications, one covering a longer time span and the other containing several thousand revised entries and additional library locations. The problem was solved when Rowman and Littlefield, acting in the best interest of the library community, graciously agreed to withdraw. Rowman and Littlefield has informed the Library that it will transfer orders and deposits received for the 1961-1970 cumulation to the R. R. Bowker Company, which will acknowledge receipt of each order and request confirmation of the order from every individual purchaser.

Publication of New Serial Titles, 1950-1970 which will include the revised entries and additional library locations planned for the Rowman and Littlefield edition, is expected in the second half of 1973.

SENATOR TAFT RECEIVES INDEX

service. Beyond their value for a portrait of the man himself, the Taft Papers provide scholars with the materials for a fuller narrative than we have yet had of the political history of the nation from the period of Reconstruction to the eve of the New Deal."

The Taft Papers, housed in the Library's Manuscript Division, consist of 700,000 manuscripts documenting Taft's long public career. The first installment of the papers came to the Library as early as 1919 and were added to by Mr. Taft during his lifetime. Over the years further additions have been made by his family.

The Index, which contains more than 465,000 entries, is the 19th publication in the Presidents' Papers Index Series, and the second of three multivolume indexes for 20th-century Presidential collections. An item index, it lists the writers and recipients of letters and memoranda, and includes entries under the speakers' names for speeches and lectures, mainly Taft's, in the major manuscript series in the collection and in the 658-reel microfilm edition of the collection.

There is, for example, a family correspondence series including letters in which his proud mother describes young William at the age of three months, and 50 years later, objects to his running for the Presidency. The early letters in this series depict the New England and midwestern cultural background of Taft and his judicial heritage as the son of a prominent lawyer, jurist, and Attorney General.

In other series of letters, speeches, diaries, legal instruments, and other manuscripts, the Index follows Taft in detail through his career as U.S. Solicitor General (1890-92), U.S. Circuit Court Judge (1892-1900), President of the U.S. Philippine Commission (1900-01), first civil Governor of the Philippine Islands (1901-04); Secretary of War (1904-08), President (1909-13), professor of constitutional law at Yale (1913-21), and Chief Justice of the United States (1921-30). Here also are the primary sources on his peripheral activities as a practicing lawyer in Cincinnati, President of the American Bar Association (1913), Co-chairman of the War Labor Board (1918-19), and member and President (1915) of the League to Enforce Peace.

Taft's remarkable candor in writing to his family, friends, and close associates insures a continually clear view of his motives, aspirations, and opinions. The index lists and locates thousands of these letters to his wife, Helen (4,527 entries); his half-brother, Charles (2,513); his son, Robert (864); Elihu Root (1,232); Mabel Boardman (2,106); Charles D. Hilles (3,160); and Theodore Roosevelt (2,724). Most of the latter group is in a single series of Taft-Roosevelt letters revealing the personal and political relationship of the two men and documenting the full participation of Taft in the Roosevelt administration in which Taft, in addition to his Cabinet position, acted as an unofficial "assistant President" and roving ambassador.

The Librarian, Mrs. Morris, and Senator Taft

Four major series are complete for Taft's Presidential period: two sets of Executive Office Files, the "President's Personal File," and a series of letterbooks.

Relating to his career in the law are his superior and circuit court notebooks, dozens of legal case files, his Yale lectures on constitutional law, opinions and letters to his brother, Horace, in the Supreme Court period, memoranda on cases before the Supreme Court, and correspondence with many of the leading jurists in this country and abroad. Among them were Charles Evans Hughes, John Marshall Harlan, Lord Birkenhead of England, and Sir Charles Fitzpatrick of Canada.

With approximately 20,000 different persons or organizations represented in the Index for a collection covering many decades of public activities of national scope, the Taft Papers offer wide opportunity for research in a variety of American historical developments.

A provenance essay on the collection, a brief description of each series, a reel list indicating the content of each microfilm reel, and a list of the Presidential Period File titles make up Volume 1 of the Index. The name index entries are in Volumes 2-6.

Prices and ordering procedures are explained in the Library of Congress Publications section of this issue of the Information Bulletin.

CONGRESS APPROVES FUNDS FOR EEO PROGRAM

The Librarian has announced to the staff that Congress has approved a request for a supplemental appropriation of $150,000 for fiscal 1973 in order to implement an affirmative action program to carry out the provisions of the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972. The supplemental appropriation bill now goes to the President for his approval. The funds will assist the Library in expanding its training, recruitment, and counseling programs, while at the same time establishing a core group of permanent full time positions to staff the Equal Opportunity Office.

A principal objective of expanding the counseling and training programs will be to provide staff members with added opportunities to reach their full potentials and as a result advance in grade, responsibility, and achievement.

Daniel H. Woodward, newly appointed Librarian of the Henry E. Huntington Library, received his M.S. in L.S. degree from Catholic University in 1969 and his Ph. D. in English literature from Yale.
